Advanced Strategic Intelligence Analysis

The ONLY such

Africa!

Learn to analyse issues and threats on strategic level

Learn from expert and

This advanced course raises the level of expertise in understanding the critical thinking and related cognitive re-evaluation necessary to ensure their analysis and hypothesising is “on track” and not diverted by work pressure, comfort-zone or traditional thinking. These problems that beset strategic analysis lead often to analysts providing quick and relatively “easy” answers to complex issues, without taking time to think through all the relevant aspects carefully and rigorously.

This course is intended for strategic intelligence analysts who have completed the strategic intelligence analysis training and who now need to enhance their skills in advanced analysis techniques and intelligence project management.

At the conclusion of this training programme, the students will:

Presented by Don
McDowell
(Intelligence Study Centre Australia)

- understand the process and critical thinking demands of strategic intelligence analysis;
- be able to discuss and demonstrate an understanding of the conceptual demands of analysis designed to achieve effective balance between quantitative and qualitative analytical approaches;
- understand the concepts and processes involved in the development of hypothetical scenarios, and be capable of applying critical and comparative analysis techniques;
- be competent in generating analytical indicators and applying these to the comprehensive development of detailed data collection plans appropriate to research needs;
- be capable of developing appropriate Indicators & Warnings (I&W) matrix formats for specified target activities; and
- understand and apply risk-and-threat assessment techniques, providing Risk Assessments including recommendations for risk-management programmes.
