

Intelligence Essentials Workshop Series

Getting the best from your analyst

Tuesday 24 April 2012

Venue to be announced, Pretoria

Analysis of information is primarily the responsibility of the analyst. However, the investigating officer is still the person that must make sure that all dimensions of the investigation are covered, including the analysis of information. At the end of the workshop you will:

- understand the role of the analyst during the different stages of the investigation.
- understand the different approaches available to deal with intelligence analysis during projects and investigations.
- understand the importance of conducting an initial assessment of information inclusive of typical aspects that should be covered in such assessment including a criminal value chain, analytical plan and scenario plan.
- identify suitable analytical techniques prior to and during investigation as well as some of the analytical techniques available to the analyst when producing analytical products for intelligence driven investigation.
- Understand the factors that contribute to successful analytical driven investigations as well as the role and function of analytical scorecard to measure the outcome of analytical activity.

Your facilitator is Mario Eybers, a former Commercial Crime Analyst at the South African Banking Crime Risk Information Centre as well as SAPS Crime Intelligence. He has extensive experience assisting investigators and prosecutors in intelligence-driven projects.
